Why Turnkey Testing?

The software development process is going through transformational changes. There is an increased focus on making the overall development process faster and deliver even higher quality of product. The pace of changes in technology world are posing unique challenges for organizations in successfully testing their software systems without increasing the development cost. Some of the common problems that organizations are facing in the ever changing and evolving software development process are listed below -

- No time for testing software performance before moving to production.
- Unexpected issues during development process resulting in short window for testing.
- Organizations don't have infrastructure, tools or expertise to support your testing need.
- Customer satisfaction is critical so need independent assessment of your software before putting in front of your customers.
- Short on testing budget due to unexpected spike in development work.

Need fast paced testing in shorter duration.

Reduce testing cost w/o compromising quality.

Improved testing coverage without overhead cost.

Need independent and self sufficient testing team.
